II. SUMILLA

La asignatura pertenece al área curricular de Formación Profesional, es de naturaleza teórica y práctica.

World trade, international capital inflows and outflows, foreign direct investment, global portfolio investments, technological diffusion, e-commerce and the like are now everyday realities. One ignores these trends only at their own peril. Business executives need to understand the factors driving industries and firms to compete on a global basis and to develop management and marketing strategies and policies to deal with this reality. Although the speed and degree of globalization will vary by industry according to a variety of technological and environmental factors, all modern executives, in any field of specialization, must incorporate a global perspective in the execution of their tasks. As global economic growth occurs, understanding marketing in all cultures is increasingly important. International Marketing addresses global issues and describes concepts relevant to all international business executives, regardless of the extent of their marketing involvement.

Besides that, English language management became a "must" in the list of business abilities for every manager or business researcher; for this reason, even though Spanish is the mother tongue for Peruvian students, this course will be developed fully in English.

This course focuses on marketing strategy and management within the context of global and international markets. It evaluates cultural differences and aims to enhance your skills in developing and implementing marketing strategies and decision making in international contexts.

This course was developed to provide international business students with an opportunity to study interesting aspects of the international business environment and to improve, first, their ability to communicate in English, and secondly, to improve their capacity to assess and solve international business problems. This course will provide practical experience in conducting research and evaluating opportunities existing in international markets, developing plans for exploiting those opportunities, and examine the risks facing business activities in those markets through implementation of marketing plans. Through discussion, research, and practical activity students will develop the ability to prepare marketing programs that effectively reduce risk and take advantage of opportunities in the marketplaces of the world.

In this course you will also learn by participating in a research on a practical project developed by the professor (on the Peruvian textile sector). The course has been designed to introduce greater realism and perspective through actual experiences. Student participation is a key element in the learning situation and your active involvement in the project is expected. You should also be prepared to give and receive criticism on your marketing plans and those of your student colleagues.
